

MODERN LANGUAGE ASSOCIATION (MLA) HANDBOOK FOR WRITERS

INTRODUCTION

Modern Language Association (MLA) style is one of several types of standards for writing and documentation. MLA style is typically used in the humanities compared with, for example, American Psychological Association (APA) style, which is generally used in the social sciences. The MLA Handbook is currently in its ninth edition. If you are writing a publication in the humanities, you will likely use MLA to cite formal works. Examples of formal works include journal articles, books, and professionally made multimedia. Exercise your personal discretion when citing works that may be less formal like social media posts, YouTube videos, and casual conversations.

A CLOSER LOOK

In academic works, citations are important to show readers how current arguments are informed by supporting material from previous research. Proper citation enables those reading (or viewing) academic works to accurately trace argumentation back to its original source. Some form of citation format is usually required for a paper or project that is submitted for academic peer review.

CITATION EXAMPLES (EXAMPLES FROM OWL.ENGLISH.PURDUE.EDU)

Single Author (Book)

Last Name, First Name. Title of Book. City of Publication, Publisher, Publication Date.

Note: Only include the city of publication if the book was published before 1900, if the publisher has offices in more than one country, or if the publisher is unknown in North America.

Two or More Authors (Book)

This format remains mostly the same except that the first author's last name is listed first followed by the subsequent authors by first name, then last name.
